

JOIN US FOR A VIRTUAL CONGRESSIONAL BRIEFING

SCIENCE-DRIVEN APPROACHES TO REDUCING INEQUITIES THROUGH PUBLIC HEALTH POLICY

The National Prevention Science Coalition will host a congressional briefing on deploying prevention strategies to improve racial equity, particularly in issue areas such as health and education. Research and experience provide guidance about what works to reduce racial disparities and improve health outcomes for all Americans. Despite the existence of strategies shown to reduce inequities and foster equitable practices, translating that knowledge into effective policies has lagged behind the science. During this briefing, national experts will present approaches to advance equity by implementing prevention-informed policies, discuss policies likely to have a population level impact and others that are targeted to specific social conditions within communities, and discuss how researchers and public sectors can work together to enact such change.

Tuesday
December 6, 2022

Legislative Speaker:
Rep. Deborah Ross (D-NC-02)

1:30 - 3:00
EST

Rachel Shelton
Columbia University

Iheoma Iruka
UNC-Chapel Hill

Vicki Johnson-Lawrence
RTI International

FOR MORE INFORMATION & REGISTRATION:

<https://www.npscoalition.org/briefing-announcement>